Remembering James Graham Forgie

It was 100 years ago on April 26th 1918 that Gunner James Graham Forgie was killed by a shell blast in the railway cutting in the small French village of Villers-Bretonneux. He was one of the thousands of casualties suffered by the 13th and 15th brigades of the AIF as they halted the German counter attack (Operation Michael) from breaking through the British lines. It is interesting to note that this feat was featured on the front page of the New York Times.

He left his jacket at the Taylor and Forgie carpentry workshop in Tod Street telling colleagues to leave it there for his return, but that was not to be. Even more poignant was that he married Mary Wilson of Norwood two days before he embarked for France.

His last message home came in 1971 when a message was found in a bottle on a beach in Esperance WA. The message has been preserved by Art Lab and kept at Cowan Street. The jacket is on display in a cabinet at our Cowan Street refreshment area.

Mark & Gizelle Forgie were so proud to attend and be part of the centenary commemorations in France and commend Gawler's new memorial to everyone.

We hope you enjoy our free puzzle book. It's a great opportunity to test your skill and knowledge and keep mentally active. It's also a lot of fun. These puzzle books are supplied free as part of our ongoing commitment to community service. Solutions and answers to all puzzles contained in this issue can be found in the rear of the book.

PLAYING SUDOKU

To solve a Sudoku puzzle, every number from 1 to 9 must appear in:

- Each of the nine vertical columns
- Each of the nine horizontal rows
- Each of the nine 3 x 3 blocks

Remember no number can occur more than once in any row, column or 3x3 block.

PLAYING CROSSWORDS

Crosswords are one of the greatest word association puzzles of all time. Our 15x15 crosswords are easy to do in one session or complete over time. Using the clues provided fill in the answers moving left to right and top to bottom. Work with a friend if you want as sometimes two heads are better than one when solving a crossword puzzle. The more puzzles you do, the more familiar you'll be with standard puzzle clues and answers.

PLAYING WORDSEARCH

Find all the words listed hidden in the grid of letters. They can be found in straight lines up, down, forwards, backwards or even diagonally.

PLAYING CODE CRACKER

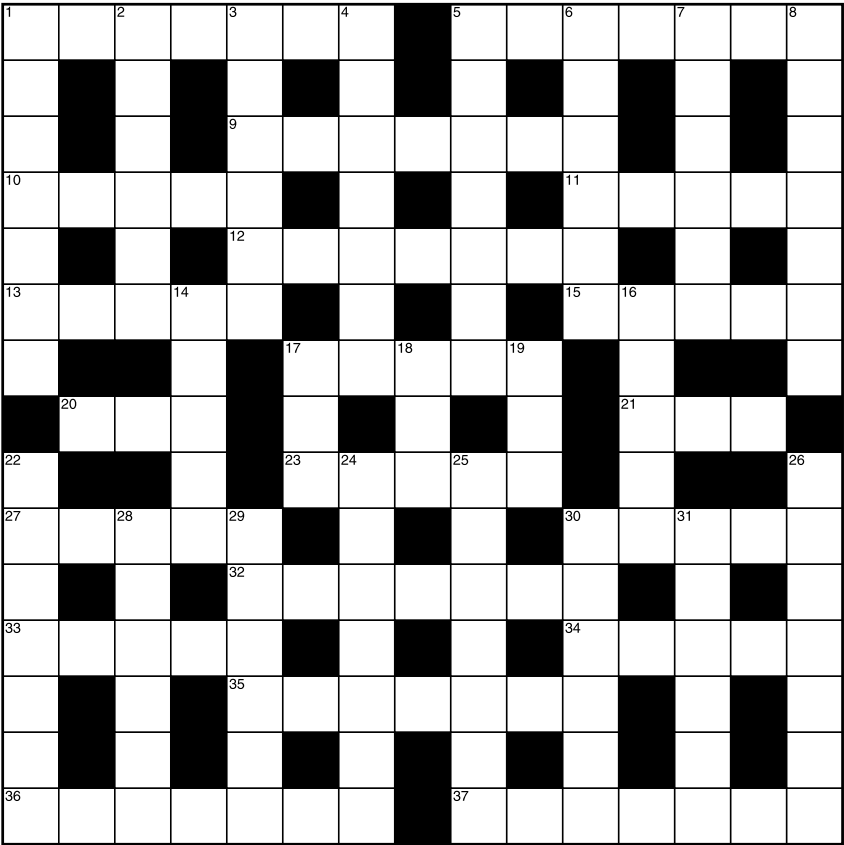

Each number represents a different letter of the alphabet. Work out which number stands for which letter to complete the crossword. We've given you two letters to start. All words are from a dictionary and no proper nouns are used. All letters of the alphabet are not always used. When you have cracked the code fill in the answer in the boxes at the bottom.

PLAYING TRIVIA

Trivia is a great way to test your memory for general knowledge and history. Simply write your answers beside the questions and check to see how many you got right. Great to do with friends or on your own.

COLOURING FOR ADULTS

Like painting and craft, coloring offers a great source for focus and creativity. It has been shown to have stress-reducing benefits and helps with anxiety in people of all ages. It is a great fun social activity it also produces a similar calming effect on the brain to meditation.

Words for Grieving Friends

What do we say to someone going through a crisis like a death or a life changing experience? Most people tend to stumble looking for the 'right word during this most sensitive time.

We can feel lost for words and fearful of saying the 'wrong' thing.

Firstly, remember that grieving takes a long time (on average 2-5 years) and during this period grieving people need ongoing understanding. Before we think about what words we can say, there are basic principles that grieving people need. They need to feel safe with us. Acceptance, by us, of what they have to say. They need to be listened to, without interruption, letting them repeat their story hundreds of times.

We need to allow them to grieve in their own way, without judging their methods.

We need to ask them what they would like us to do to help them. Maybe there is nothing active, rather just 'being there', or a touch/hug is what they want. Keeping these needs in mind we can use the following phrases because we really care for our friends.

First create genuine safety.

"Whatever you want to tell me, I won't think different of you and I promise it won't go out of this room (confidentiality)."
"Your feelings are OK, feeling angry is normal."
"Tell me about it. I have plenty of time to listen."
"You're not going crazy, grieving is normal."
"Tell me how you're feeling about that, I've got time to listen."
"There are no words I can say to take your pain away, I wish there were."

"It takes a long time to grieve, even telling your story 400 times OK."
"Even if he/she is out of their suffering, I guess there is still pain for you, that's normal."
"I'm sorry for the pain you are feeling."
"Tell me what is the worst time for you."
"Tell me what hurts the most, it's a long hard road for you."
"It's OK to cry, let it out, keeping the tears in will only make you sick. I'm not embarrassed and I'll be here as long as you need me."
Give the person a tissue and a squeeze of their arm.
Things to avoid are clichés like "she'd want you to get on with your life", or "you're the man of the family now." These statements are not helpful.
Sometimes people say, "but isn't she wallowing? Can't he/she get on with life. It's been nearly a year." They care for the person, but they're putting unrealistic pressure and demands on them.

Finally avoid giving advice.

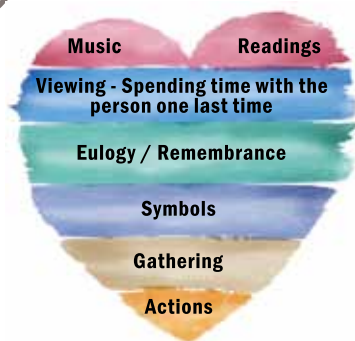

Grieving people may feel confused and scared, however it is better for you to say, "let's talk about it, what ideas can we think of." When the person says, "others are worse off" or "he's out of his suffering", respond with "However, this is your pain and it's real."

Why we have viewings

A 10-part series examining the individual elements of a meaningful funeral ceremony,

Last edition, in the introductory article for this series, I illustrated how the meaningful funeral ceremony is like a tapestry. Made up of a number of elements, it creates a transformative experience that is much greater than the sum of its individual parts. While each family's ceremony will and should be a unique tapestry, it can only be a tapestry if it draws on a full repertoire of possible

The rest of this series will explore, in turn, common funeral elements - taking you from the viewing/vigil through to the gathering for refreshments afterwards.

The first funeral element is that of the viewing. In some countries this is historically called a “wake”. The term “wake” comes from the Middle English “waken,” meaning “to be awake, to keep watch.” In days gone by, it was customary for the family and primary mourners to keep around-the-clock vigil over the dead body of their loved one. The body was kept in the home, often on display in an open coffin in the parlour. Twenty-four hours a day, mourners took turns sitting at the loved one’s side to safeguard the body, offer prayers, pay their respects, receive friends and comfort one another.

Today, of course, the body is almost always safeguarded in the locked funeral home from the time of the transfer of the body from its place of death until the time of the funeral. No longer does the family stay present with the body during this time prior to the funeral. Yet the viewing remains a common element, one I believe continues to be essential regardless of the plans for ceremony and disposition.

In my next article, I will talk more about the role of the dead body itself in the creation of the tapestry that is the meaningful funeral ceremony. While I do believe that bodiless funerals are not as transformative as those that incorporate and honour the body throughout the process, I also want to emphasise that the viewing is an essential funeral element even when the family chooses to immediately cremate, or not have the body present during the ceremony.

The viewing can be a time of greeting and reception that takes place prior to the service. And even though many bereaved families choose this to be a private time, it is helpful for families to consider the best ways to activate their support networks, and that is what making the viewing time less private can accomplish.

When families open the viewing to others, they are essentially inviting their friends and family members to come to support them. The family is opening the door, quite literally, to a time of informal social greeting and empathy. They are creating an entryway for support. When they opt not to give opportunities for friends to gather with them, it’s very common for those same friends and family members to end up not supporting them.

In fact, after the death of a loved one, people often come up to me and say, “I was taken aback that quite a few of my friends never acknowledged the death. They have not called, they didn’t even send a sympathy card. And when I saw my friend in the grocery store the other day, she didn’t even say anything about the death. Why could this be?” The first thing I ask them is, “Did you invite friends to gather with you?” Almost always in these cases, the answer is no. The viewing and ceremony were private. Perhaps there was no ceremony at all. What these families didn’t realise is that by choosing privacy, they were choosing to not open the door to support. Consciously or unconsciously, their friends took this to mean that they want their grief to be private rather than a community affair.

We continue to see a trend toward more efficiency, more privacy, less ceremony, and in its extreme, immediate unattended cremation. Yet the full benefit of the viewing and ceremony can be made possible by allowing more people to attend. Sometimes holding the viewing a day or two before the ceremony, in the evening allows more friends to attend. This sets the community support in motion right away and gives people a chance to share news of the death with other friends and neighbours. But viewing opportunities right before the formal ceremony are also helpful and much preferred to no viewing at all.

In addition to inviting and accepting support from others, the viewing also helps the mourners acknowledge the reality of the death, encourages the sharing of memories (recall), gives them an opportunity for the expression of their inner

“Too often we underestimate the power of a touch, a smile, a kind word, a listening ear, an honest compliment or the smallest act of caring, all of which have the potential to turn a life around.”

thoughts and feelings, helps them begin to consider the meaning of their loved one’s life and death and sets them on a course for integration through grief.

We know from experience that one of the first things many families do after the viewing is review the remembrance/memorial book to see who attended. This simple, common behaviour speaks volumes about the importance of gathering. I encourage families to use this time to display memorabilia, solicit stories and memories from guests (you may like to place notepads, pens, instructions and a basket to collect the stories on a table) and play music in the background that is meaningful to the family.

Viewing is the funeral element that sets everything in motion. It opens the door to support and healing.

Durdin Funerals was started back in the 1920s in Hamley Bridge by local builder W.H. Durdin.

In the 1960's Durdins acquired Ahrns Bros Funerals in Balaklava, expanding to care for families in both Hamley Bridge and Balaklava. His grandson Warren took over the business in the early 1980's.

Durdin & Forgie Family Funerals was established in 2003 when Durdin Funerals became part of Taylor & Forgie in Gawler. This marked a period of investment in facilities at the Scotland street premises with a new 110-seat chapel being constructed and improved community services.

Scientific studies have proven that working with puzzles and other logic games helps improve reasoning, memory and logic. They promote a form of synergy between the left and right brain, termed by psychologists as a “full brain approach”. This can result in better memory, deeper learning and better recall. Puzzles appeal to our creative and logical minds, offering a full brain work out, especially for retirees who don’t have a daily work commitment.

Taylor & Forgie Funerals recognises this and hope that by offering this Puzzle Book with up to six-month’s worth of fun brain exercises, we can actually help you improve your brain vibrancy as you get older. One of the biggest fears for us all as we get older is losing our mental sharpness, possibly developing dementia, Alzheimer’s or other mental illnesses – but by giving our brain a moderate workout on a frequent basis we can help hold off the onset of some of these issues.

Puzzles and games also instigate social interaction and communication. Doing puzzles together is a pleasurable experience for all participants helping to maintain social and communicative skills. Science has also shown that when a puzzle is finally completed there is a feeling of satisfaction and dopamine is released in the brain, as a kind of reward system for our efforts.

Please enjoy your FREE Taylor & Forgie Funerals Puzzle Book. All the answers and solutions to puzzles and trivia contained this book are provided on the following pages. Test yourself by answer or completing one puzzle at a time then checking to see just how good you are. Good luck.
